

ICAR 10 days short course on " strategies for containment of antimicrobial resistance" from 13th to 22nd Nov. 2017 was organised by Dept. of Vety. Microbiology, College of Veterinary Science & Animal Husbandry, NDVSU, Jabalpur. The inauguration was held on 13th Nov. 2107 . Dr. V. S. Tomar, Vice Chancellor, JNKVV, Jabalpur was the Chief Guest of the function and Dr. Dharmendra Verma, Director, State Forest Research Institute, Jabalpur was the Guest of Honour . Total 25 participants participated in the course . 17 Lectures were delivered by guests ,dignitaries and faculty members. Total 6 practical demonstrations and hands on training were performed by the participants. Total 6 visits to different National and State level institutes were visited by the participants.Valedictory function was organised on 22nd Nov. 2017 and Chief Guest of the function was Dr. A. D. N. Bajpai, Former Vice Chancellor , Himachal Pradesh University, Shimla.

It was concluded from the 10 days course that the global threat of antimicrobial resistance can only be combated by the judicious and prudent use of antibiotics and alternative therapies such as phage therapy , herbal drugs etc.

